

SHARAE STACKHOUSE - Bio

Sharae Stackhouse is a passionate and committed follower of Christ. She has spent several years ministering to God's people and has found much purpose and joy in children's ministry. She is devoted to playing a part in seeing the next generation reach their full potential – spiritually, emotionally, and educationally. Sharae has served as an associate minister; co-led a youth ministry; and taught Sunday School and Bible Study to children and adults alike. She is the program director at JosiahKids Inc. A youth development nonprofit organization committed to the mission of raising the next generation of service-minded leaders. She has held this position since January of 2020.

Sharae has nearly 25 years of communication and marketing experience, in both the not-for-profit and public sectors. She earned a Bachelor's degree in English, with a minor in African American Studies from Valdosta State University. Sharae later earned her Master's degree in Corporate Communication from Baruch College, graduating with honors. She currently works as a consultant in the Employee Experience business at Willis Towers Watson (WTW), a leading global advisory, broking, and solutions company.

Sharae specializes in communication and change management for mid-to large-scale projects. She has extensive experience communicating employee benefits and creating Diversity Equity and Inclusion initiatives. Sharae has developed strategies to support the implementation of annual enrollment campaigns, health and wellness programs, and retirement choice campaigns. Her clients represent a wide range of industries, including retail, transportation, food manufacturing, and healthcare.

Sharae is an avid reader and enjoys traveling. She is very devoted to her family and friends and holds a special place in her heart for all of her nieces, nephews, and God children.
